Piano notes labeled songs

This Mary Had A Little Lamb Easy Piano Music always goes down nicely with young beginners in their first piano lessons. It's so nice to play a melody that everyone knows. Easy to learn and fun to play! The two excellent incentives to get the little ones off to a good start when starting the piano. Even if you don't read music it's easy to pick up that tune. Just use the fingers of the right hand 1, 2 and 3 in E, D and C medium. So its simple repetitive pattern of only 3 notes is perfect for the little ones to comprehend. If you are completely new to the piano check out my other piano lesson posts that introduce the basics of piano for beginners. Have you tried our first ebook of piano lessons? Our best-selling eBook is the perfect introduction to the piano for your little one. See product A xylophone or bell bars are a great way to start. Sing the song and tone it on the xylophone or bell bars first, as it helps the child understand where the notes move up and down. If not, go straight to the piano and work through the next steps together to introduce the child to notes and rhythm before trying to play it. To print Mary Had some easy piano music lamb, click here or picture above. How to play Mary had some easy lamb piano music 1. Sing the song together while you play the notes. 2. If you have a xylophone, let the child play the melody below as you point to the notes in the correct order. Physical movement helps them understand how notes actually step up and down. 3. Use the printable score, play the next little game together. Ask the child to track with their finger the path of the notes by sliding up or down without removing the finger from the paper. As they move they say up, down accordingly. Warn them to watch out where the 'hog' notes between 'lamb' and 'it's' from E to C. Make it sound vocally funny with exaggerated ups, downs and a big fuss about hops! 4. Explain that there are four beats in a bar or measure and count 4 beats together before starting each time. Help the child to place their fingers (in a curved shape) on the correct notes. Talk them through each sentence in the line of the song by pointing to the notes as they try to play them. Depending on the age of the child may need different levels of help and attempts to manage this. 5. Once the child has mastered playing the melody on their own, there is a simple accompaniment of the teacher that sounds lovely when played as a small duet. This gives a lot of pleasure to budding pianists! For the simplest score for kids and free printable music education resources, check out my Pinterest board below. If you have an illustrious grand piano or a funky techno beat electronic keyboard, you can teach your child several simple simple ones melodies in a fun and encouraging way. Introducing your child to the basics of music can help them in many different ways. Studies have shown that there is a substantial correlation between music and language skills. It turns out that learning new scales, chords and songs is a lot like learning new words, phrases and stories. This makes your training years a perfect time to start learning music! If you'd like your child to be the next Mozart or are just looking for a way to build their cognitive skills, these keyboard songs for beginners are a great place to start. As they get older, they'll both be glad they got the basics of music at a young age, as this may be the beginning of a lifetime of musical enjoyment! Get the basics Down Some parents are reluctant to teach their kids basic music skills because they don't know where to start. The good news is that you don't need to be a professional player to teach your child easy keyboard songs like the ones below. In fact, you don't need any musical experience to get started – you can even learn alongside your child! First, you will need to learn the location of the notes on the piano. Start by finding C – it's the white key directly to the left of the two-key black group. Using only the white keys, the notes continue in alphabetical order up to G, and then restarted in A. You can label notes C, D, E, F, G, A and B with stickers to make it easier for your child. The easiest piano song notes will fall on the white keys, so there's no need to worry about tagging sharp ones and floors just yet. Once you've found where those seven notes are, you and your kids can start learning songs!5 Easy Piano Songs with LettersMary Had a Little LambThis is often one of the first keyboard songs for kids that instructors will teach new students. The song has additional verses about the adventures Mary and her lamb have, to keep the fun going while you sing and play together. Check out the verses and notes below. Photo by Eduardo Merille You can't have too much piano music for beginners! Teachers, complement your piano method: With FREE children's scores, easy to intermediate piano songs. Traditional and classic. Ladders, chords, and exercises, guides and reference sheets to explain the keyboard, guitar tabs, and more! Important music sheets for the first week to a month: Choose one of these handy designs, in three different styles. Black NotesLittle songs all in black keys using only fingers 2, 3, and 4. Some old, some new, and all easy for beginners! Check out the long page of black key songs... 5-finger ladders for the configuration of the posture of the beginner's hand. Starting at position C, and climbing to the next position of the white keys, scales are the most important startup technique my students learn. With note names inside note heads, and finger With the first set, students catch up quickly! Ladders for the left hand, too. Worms - only printable notes! It is not yet true to read notes, but following UP or DOWN. This little exercise is just looking at the musical staff as a ladder. One slow note at a time, notes are dragged up or down - or keep the same. Now you will know if your students are understanding the movement of notes on the staff. The easy sheets and songs above are what I send home with my students in classes 1 - 4. Some, like the simple scales and chords shown above, greatly improve students' memories of what we've spent in classes, because they're VISUALS. They also help parents, who cannot be musicians. Others, such as the paper keyboard, become a permanent reference as we add a new key every week until even the black key names are memorized. Additional beginner sheets and music crickets go jumping... is really just a re-named version of Snakes Go for a Walk. You will find these two sheets on this page. When students thoroughly get worms and snakes, it's time to graduate to this page, which is almost the same, except for amazing hops! Fuzzy WuzzyThese graphic shows a helper notes version of Fuzzy Wuzzy. (Another layout without written notes is also found on this page.) Only 5 keys are used in this song about the hairless bear. God is good lyric and musicSo out this song has skipped, it's easy, short, and sweet. Especially with AlphaNotes! But there are other arrangements on this page. Greensleeves Not the melody, but the accompaniment of easily broken chords. You may think this is too difficult for your young students. Trust me, once they can touch a 5-ticket ladder and make a deal, they'll be able to play broken chords. And they are not reading the notes, but following the chord symbols above the musical notes. The first beautiful piano music for my students. It will inspire them. Indian Dance High Energy with a non-stop melody, this is a song that your beginners will be surprised to hear themselves play! A key-only version and an AlphaNotes version are also available on this site... This song looks a lot harder than it is. Jingle Bells scoresBeginners do well with family songs! They'll enjoy it, even if Christmas is far away. What is shown here has written notes, but there are several versions on this page. Kum Ba YahAn old melody with simple appeals to God.This is a song familiar to many. Louie Louie scores for pianoOkay – so this isn't a beginner's version! But I have a LETTERED-NOTE version, very easy to read, on the same page. This song is really just the top 3 chords in the C key, set to louie Louie's rhythm. Mainly, this music on this page is made from Middle C songs with melodies shared between hands. Many will be familiar to their students. These are the same songs (along with many more) found in my book Songs Old & New.Additionally, there are some pieces that make use of left hand chords or very simple accompaniments. Most medium C melodies have chord suggestions or illustrative graphics for an entrepreneurial companion to devise their own backup. Some have also written secondo parts, for easy duet playback. Some of the songs duplicate songs for beginners and also music with notes with lyrics, but that's because they tend to make songs with multiple levels of difficulty for my students. Every child, and each situation is unique every child, each situation is unique ... some children will happily play week after week from their piano method books, enjoying every page turn with their new challenge, while others find the books boring and dig into their heels as they try to drag them through their lesson book. Some beginners move quickly, while others need months and months to digest the small handful of notes around Middle C. Some kids have heard classical piano music from the moment they were born, with others, all they know is video game music. So how to choose instruction for them? So how do you choose beginner piano music? Well, all kids love to play what's familiar to them. You'll have to stretch them, broaden your tastes, but you still have to satisfy your desire to play what sounds to them like music (the reason you were excited to play the piano in the first place) or risk losing them as students. I will never forget an account of the late John Holt (writer and risker home schooling advocate, and cello teacher-if-lover) in his book, Never Too Late: My Musical Life Story, about meeting another adult cello student. Give them more than just ladders... Like him, she was a beginner, and they were comparing notes (no pun intended). Holt was thoroughly enjoying the growing number of real cello pieces he could play, even though he knew his skills were modest. But the poor cellist woman was confined to stairs by her teacher, week after week. At the end of each lesson this man would say something like, I think he's almost ready for a real piece... But no, we better continue with the stairs. Yikes! Can you imagine? I don't think many of us would do it to our students, but the story is a useful reminder that LOVE, a sense of wonder, and emotion are what attract children to music, and teachers shouldn't forget that. Yes, they need the basic base. And more... Stairs? Yes. Exercises? Yes. Reading tickets? Of course. But with beginner piano music, always at least one fun piece, a piece that gives the child something to look forward to in the moment of practice. Keep looking until you find a piece you enjoy, and you're likely to work on it happily until it's perfect. So where do you find that perfect piece? It's so easy to make the wrong choice for a demanding student! And there's the annoying little vice in the back of your mind remembering that copying is definitely not legal... But the score is so expensive! If only there were sources of free children's scores, piano music for beginners! Music, moreover, with suggestions for teachers, stories and advice. Well, there are now. My site, and other sites too. I have a large and growing collection of beginner piano music, and what I offer here has been tested and found worth keeping! Much of this is only complementary to the beginner piano music method books I use, but a lot of it is music that I consider essential for my students, to establish a practical basis for understanding music theory. Add a little spice to your students' musical diet without breaking the bench - almost all the beginner piano music you'll find here is free and easily printable, with no strings attached.
